

Taking Steps to Inclusion

The 'DUTY TO ACCOMMODATE' prevents employers from rejecting candidates on the basis of their protected characteristics, which include disability, age, gender, religion/faith, sexual orientation, race/colour, marital status or ethnic origin.

An employer, a service provider or a union has the obligation to take steps to eliminate disadvantage to employees, clients or PROSPECTIVE EMPLOYEES resulting from a rule or a physical barrier that may have an adverse impact on individuals or protected groups.

To find out more about your legal obligations, go to Tool #3 Legal Issues.

The Duty to Accommodate obligates an employer to be meaningful (proactive) in creating an inclusive workplace for all stakeholders.

Inclusive workplaces come from implementing quality accommodations. “[from 3.2] The most successful accommodation outcomes happen when workplace parties are able to work collaboratively and respectfully with a view to finding meaningful and effective solutions.

This document is provided for information purposes only. The content provided is not legal advice and should not be used or relied upon as such. Applicable law may differ from jurisdiction to jurisdiction; if you are seeking legal advice, you are advised to consult a lawyer in your province or territory.

HireForTalent.ca

HIRE for TALENT has made every effort to use the most respectful words possible while writing these materials. We realize, however, that the most appropriate terminology may change over time. We developed these materials with the intent to respect the dignity and inherent rights of all individuals.